IMPORTANT NEW INVENTION.

Australian Cristal

GLASS

SPECTACLES.

The only perfect Lens in existence. Superior to any other in use—constructed in accordance with the science and philosophy of nature in the peculiar form of a

Concavo-Convex Elipsis.

Admirably adapted to the Organ of Sight, and perfectly natural to the eye, affording altogether the best artificial help to the human vision ever invented.

Sold only by the Professor of Optics and Spectacle Manufacturer.

The Advantages

Of these Spectacles over all others are:

1st.—The only true Lens known being perfectly free from chromatic light, so well known to be the cause of injury to the vision, and which makes the change from Spectacles to Glasses of stronger power so often required while in many instances both near and distant objects are seen with equal facility through the same Glasses.

2d.—Can be worn with perfect ease for any length of time at one sitting, giving astonishing clearness of vision, particularly by candle or other artificial light—comfort to the spectacle wearer hitherto unknown.

3d.—When the eyes ache or pain through the action of a bright light, such as is reflected from snow, sunny weather, white paper, and in reading, writing or sewing, or vivid colored bodies, these lenses, by softening the rays, effect a most agreeable sensation and give great relief.

4th.—In all nervous affections of the eye, causing dull and startling pains in the eyeball or temple, appearance of luminous and dark spots in the atmosphere, aching or feeling like sand in the eyes, the disturbed nerves are quieted and soothed.

5th.—Ground by peculiar machinery, got up at great cost, mathematically calculated expressly for the manufacture of this lens, so as to produce it with the true spherical accuracy, and its focus is at the exact centre, a point of vital importance, and which no other lens possesses.

6th.—These Spectacles are scientifically adjusted to every case of defective sight with unerring accuracy, whether arising from age, disease, strain, overwork or premature decay, by Dr. M. BERNHARDT, on a new, exact principle entirely his own, which has seldom failed to be correct.

7th.—Proof of superiority over the old kind of Spectacles: They are used exclusively at all the hospitals for diseases of the eye in Berlin, Prussia, and elsewhere.

8th.—Being the original inventor and manufacturer of the Australian Crystal Glass for Spectacles, He therefore claims that he has the only genuine article of that kind in the United States, for sale.

Testimony of Recommendations
From Medical Gentlemen,

Professors of the highest Opthalmic talent in Memphis, Tenn., and in the Union:

MEMPHIS, TENN., February 14, 1867.

I do most willingly bear my testimony in favor of the superiority of the Australian Crystal Spectacles over all other kinds. They are constructed upon the best established and understood principles of Optics, and their adaptation to the human eye in its different conditions of vision is so perfect as to render sight easy without effort. In my opinion none others should be used, since the eyes, once used to these, do not seem to grow old, and by having a focus at any point of the surface, they appear to restore the eyes to their youthful energy. I can the more confidently recommend Dr. BERNHARDT to the public, from an acquaintance with many of those from whom he comes recommended to us.
A. K. TAYLOR, M. D.

MEMPHIS, TENN., February 15, 1867.

I have found a great deal of pleasure in examining the exquisite fabrics of Dr. BERNHARDT, in the way of Eye-Glasses. The Crystal used by him is of wonderful purity, and the style of his Glasses so diversified as to suit every conceivable case of need. He has selected for me a pair of Glasses, which promise to give me great aid and comfort in my future reading. I am among the many persons who testify to his capacity as an Oculist and Optician and to the value of his services rendered to them, several prominent Clergymen and Statesmen with whom I am acquainted.
JOHN R. FRAYSER, M. D.

MEMPHIS, TENN., February 16, 1867.

We have examined the Lenses of Dr. BERNHARDT, and consider them superior to any we have seen. They are admirably adapted not only to improve the imperfections of impaired sight, but to relieve the weariness of vision which constant study produces. Many of the Glasses are of new and ingenious contrivance. We cordially recommend the Doctor to all those who require scientific optical assistance.

Several years of public practice and study in the hospitals in Europe, adjusting spectacles to patients under every aspect of defective vision, as well as experience in an extensive long established business in his optical stores, both here and in Europe, Dr. BERNHARDT considers it a sufficient guarantee of his ability to apply such glasses as are best calculated for the assistance or recovery of imperfect sight.

ARKANSAS UNION STATE CONVENTION.

If all "loyal" Conventions held in the Southern Provinces, as poorly represent the people as that which met at Little Rock on the 2d instant, they are very much like that representation of all the races of the world which ANACHARSIS CLOOTZ introduced to the National Assembly of France. The examination of the "credentials" of the members must have been a funny spectacle. In the whole list of members of the Convention, from all the counties, we do not recognize the names of two dozen men who were citizens of Arkansas, known to any one before the war. From the counties that we know best in the State, except Crawford, we hardly recognize a name. Among the delegates from Pulaski county are but three or four old names familiar to us. If it had been the purpose of the persons who composed the Convention, to have it supposed that they represented any considerable or respectable portion of the people of Arkansas, they ought carefully to have suppressed their names. To prove themselves for the most part mere adventurers and strangers, of very little consideration or interest or influence in the State, it was only necessary to publish their names, as a silly hen cackles when she has laid an egg. And as to those with whom Arkansas has the honor to be acquainted, not in all a baker's dozen, she has no particular cause to be proud of them, nor is it believed that they will ever win any particular renown or glory for the State. In the whole Convention there is not one single name of all those of whom that State has reason to be proud. Among the names that are as strange to us as those of the children of the captivity in the book of Nehemiah, we find no WATKINS, ROSE, GALLAGHER, WALKER, COMPTON, TURNER, or any other of those who when FOWLER, TRAPNALL, COCKE, HEMPSTEAD, CUMMINS and CURRAN lived, made the bar of Arkansas famous. The names of those who sat in the Conventicle for Pulaski are as strange to us as if they were Chaldaic. The cuckoo has indeed laid her eggs and hatched her young in the thrush's nest, if those to print whose names the Post generously lent its types, are to be deemed Arkansians. One negro, we see, was present by proxy, and one in proper person. We congratulate the one who thought it more consistent with his self-respect to stay away.

THE JEWS AND THE INSURANCE COMPANIES.

The Jews of Cincinnati have sent to their brethren in this city the proceedings of a meeting of Israelites held in that city on the 2d inst., to consider the action of several insurance companies of this city who refused to grant policies to Jews. The following resolutions were adopted:

"WHEREAS, It is known that the following insurance companies, the Manhattan, Hanover, Niagara, Republic and Germania, of New York, the last four constituting the underwriters' agency, have issued instructions to their agents not to insure the property of Jews; and whereas, such an order being opposed to the spirit of the age, and conceived in that of bigotry and fanaticism, we deem it our duty to ourselves and co-religionists to protest against such action of said companies, and to denounce it as unjust and illiberal; and which, if passed over in silence, might be construed as an acquiescence in such proscription; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we will not insure in any of the offices which have adopted, or shall hereafter adopt, the regulations mentioned above, nor will we insure with any agents for the above companies, if the persons occupying these positions should also continue to be agents for any company or companies which may have adopted, or may hereafter adopt similar regulations, and that we will exert all the influence we may respectively possess to induce others to pursue the same course we have indicated for ourselves.

"Resolved, That those of us who now have insurance in the offices above designated, or in any other offices adopting a like policy, will, as soon as convenient, withdraw all connection therewith.

"Resolved, That the city papers be requested to publish these resolutions."

Mr. John H. Law, general Cincinnati agent of the New York underwriters, published a card resigning that position in consequence of the action of the above companies in the exclusion of Jews.

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

Application on Behalf of the State of Mississippi to the Supreme Court for Injunction—Sheridan's Removals of Civil Officers—The New York Tribune on the Connecticut Elections—Strikes—Russian Treaty, Etc.

WASHINGTON, April 6, 1867.

Editors Memphis Appeal:

The application to the supreme court yesterday, in behalf of the state of Mississippi, to obtain an injunction against President Johnson and Gen. Ord, as being about to enforce the military reconstruction bill, has created quite a ferment. Parties discuss the case in reference to two questions—in what manner the court will act in the premises, and the political effects. The constitution certainly confers original jurisdiction on the supreme court in all cases where a state is a party, and the judiciary act of 1789, in its thirteenth section, assigns this same jurisdiction to the supreme court. The Rhode Island case of Luther Borden is relied upon by those who say the supreme court will not take jurisdiction. But that case was not the present case. Then the question for the supreme court was: Which party claiming to be the state was the state, whether the adherents of the old charter government or the supporters of the new or Dorr organization? The supreme court held, and very properly, too, that that was a political question, in which the court would follow implicitly the action of congress. The principle upon which the court went was the familiar one of public international law; that the courts of a country recognized as legitimate governments what were so recognized by the governments of their own countries. If, for instance, there were two competent governments in France, the court would be guided entirely by the action of its own government on the subject. In applying this principle to the Rhode Island case, the court recognized the charter government as the legitimate state organization. But in this case there is no question of compacting governments; the only question is as to the constitutionality of certain legislation of congress, by which interference is made by congress with the internal affairs of a number of states. Apart from the complications arising out of the war, there would be but one opinion upon the subject as to the power of congress thus to legislate, unless the power results from the amendment to the constitution abolishing slavery. The impression is very general, however, that the court will not give the relief prayed for in the premises. To pronounce this action of congress null and void would create the most intense excitement that could be conceived of, and in all probability the court would be legislated out of existence. As at present constituted, it is asserted that the judges deprecate the institution of the suit very much; and the attorney-general, representing the executive, denies the authority of the court to take jurisdiction. The court, it is confidently asserted, will get rid of the case if they can.

The cabinet have been in consultation on Sheridan's power to remove civil officers, and appoint other civilians in their stead. The conclusion arrived at in accordance with the opinion of the attorney-general, is that Sheridan may, as a public necessity, remove civil officers, but that he cannot appoint civilians to such vacant offices.

It is curious to see the ground taken by the New York Tribune in regard to the Connecticut election. After attributing the defeat of its party to the cowardice of the party in standing by its principles, it says hereafter "impartial" suffrage must be their motto. But they are not satisfied with impartial suffrage at the south; there they require universal suffrage.

The strikes for higher wages in New York and other northern cities shows that the north will have troubles of its own to deal with in its social system. One form of this is manifesting itself in the cry for the eight hour rule of labor, which is obliged to be a delusion, for men who work only eight hours can only get the pay for that time.

The Russian treaty for transferring to the United States frozen rocks and Esquimaux in the Arctic zone meets with much opposition, and is not likely to be ratified. The fact that Russia is willing to sell is the best evidence the territory is worthless.

FINANCIAL.

OFFICE OF THE DAILY APPEAL,
MEMPHIS, April 12, 1867.

There is nothing new to report in local money matters. The demand for money is very good, but our banks are very careful, and discount with much reluctance. There is no change in rates. Gold closed in this market at 34 to 35c.

Silver has gone up materially. Buying at 26 to 27c. Selling at 28 to 30c.

City scrip is not in demand—very few brokers are buying; 55 to 57c is the best offer we heard made for it, though brokers are asking 60c for what they have on hand.

County warrants are in good demand and few offering. Brokers offer 85 to 88c and sell at 90c.

Exchange is dull. There is but little offering, and light demand. Our banks buy at par to ⅛ off, and sell at ⅛ to ¼ premium. New Orleans exchange buying at ¼ off, and selling at par.

We have no change to report in uncurrent money. There is but little offering, and the demand is not active.

Memphis and Ohio railroad bonds, 10c; Memphis and Charleston railroad bonds, 65 to 70c; Tennessee bonds with coupons, 40 to 50c; Tennessee bonds, new, 55 to 60c; Mobile and Ohio railroad bonds, 50 to 55c; Memphis city coupons, 60 to 65c; Memphis city railroad bonds, 50 to 60c.

A meeting of the depositors of the Franklin insurance company of this city, took place at the Merchants' exchange yesterday afternoon. The proceedings of the meeting will be found in our local column.

In 1866 there were in operation, in France, 8677 miles of railway, which is 426 miles more than were in operation during 1865. The gross receipts of these railways in 1865 were $112,450,000 in gold, and in 1866, $120,700,000 in gold.

The receipts and expenditures of the following New Jersey railways, during the year 1866, were as subjoined:

	Receipts.	Expend's
Camden and Amboy	4,342,895	3,501,752
New Jersey Central	3,581,244	1,963,975
New Jersey	1,770,862	881,847
Morris and Essex	1,020,077	515,278
Camden and Atlantic	363,975	274,103
West Jersey	283,439	178,596
Belvidere Delaware	536,184	500,734
Raritan and Delaware bay	356,801	356,501

The total production of the quicksilver mines of the world, during the year 1866, was as follows:

	Flasks.
New Almaden, California	34,151
Almaden, Spain	33,000
Idria, Austria	7,225
New Idria, California	6,645
Lake Mine, "	2,880
Guadalupe, "	1,654
Mount Diabolo, "	80
Total	85,531

The accumulated stock in the different markets of the world is as near as can be ascertained about 120,000 flasks, and this abundant supply, with the annual production undiminished, has caused a serious reduction in the price.

The 8 per cent bonds of the Montgomery and Eufaula railroad are offered for sale in New York. These bonds are a first lien on the road to the extent of only $5000 per mile, and are secured by deed of trust to Nathaniel Hayden, president of the Chatham National bank, New York, and John Whiting, Esq., of Montgomery, state agent, conveying the road, its equipments, etc. The interest is payable in gold, and the bonds may be considered an excellent investment, as the prospects of the road are very favorable for the future.

General Business.

The rapid fall in the river has created a good demand for merchandise below, and our local packets begin to leave with very good trips. The retail trade today has been quite active, and our streets wore a lively appearance. There is a good trade doing with North Alabama and Mississippi, and merchants from those sections express themselves highly pleased with the large stocks from which they now have the opportunity of selecting, as well as with prices generally.

COTTON—The market has been at a stand-still for some days, and has no appearance of improvement. Holders are firmly set in their convictions, and will not meet buyers, who offer but from 24 to 25c for middling—at which prices a very few bales have been sold. Receipts for the day, 765 bales; shipments, 300 bales. We quote nominal at:

FEMALE SUFFRAGE.

Mark Twain is opposed to extending the elective franchise to women, and in an article in the Missouri Democrat, gives the following, among other reasons, for this opposition:

"Every woman in the commonwealth of Missouri would let go everything and run for state milliner. And, instead of ventilating each other's political antecedents, as men do, they would go straight after each other's private moral character. (I know them—they are all like my wife.) Before the canvass was three days old, it would be an established proposition that every woman in the state was "no better than she ought to be." Only think how it would lacerate me to have an opposition candidate say that about my wife. That is the idea, you know—having other people say those hard things. Now, I know that my wife isn't any better than she ought to be—in fact, in matters of orthodox doctrine, she is particularly shaky—but still, I would not like these things aired in a political contest."

And closes thus—"In that day a man shall say to his servant, "What is the matter with the baby?" And the servant shall reply, "It has been sick for hours." "And where is its mother?" "She is out electioneering for Sallie Robbins." And such conversations as these shall transpire between ladies and servants applying for situations: "Can you cook?" "Yes." "Wash?" "Yes." "Do general housework?" "Yes." "All right. Who is your choice for state milliner?" "Judy McGinniss." "Well, you can tramp." And women shall talk politics instead of discussing the fashions; and they shall neglect the duties of the household to go out and take a drink with candidates; and men shall nurse the baby while their wives travel to the polls to vote. And also in that day the man who hath beautiful whiskers shall beat the homely man of wisdom for governor, and the youth who waltzes with exquisite grace shall be chief of police, in preference to the man of practical sagacity and determined energy.

Every man, I take it, has a selfish end in view when he pours out eloquence in behalf of the public good in newspapers, and such is the case with me. I do not want the privileges of women extended, because my wife already holds office in nineteen different female associations, and I have to do all her clerking. If you give the women full sweep with the men in political affairs, she will proceed to run for every confounded office under the new dispensation. That will finish me. It is bound to finish me. She would not have time to do anything at all then, and the one solitary thing I have shirked up to the present time would fall on me, and my family would go to destruction; for I am not qualified for a wet nurse. MARK TWAIN."

MEETING OF CONFEDERATE BONDHOLDERS.

Another meeting of the bondholders of the seven per cent. Confederate cotton loan was held at the London tavern; Admiral Provo Wallace in the chair. The chairman said the meeting was called to receive the second report of the committee, who had obtained the highest legal opinion to disabuse the bondholders of the idea that this was not a legal loan. Sir Hugh Cairns (now Lord Cairns) had declared that it was a perfectly legal loan; and at this moment he believed the south was perfectly willing, if it was allowed to do so, to pay its quota of the claims of the bondholders. He read the second report of the committee, which gave a detailed account of the measures which had been taken to perfect the interests of the bondholders. It expressed the opinion that, if Americans might be judged by those with whom the committee had been brought into contact, the day was not far distant when a settlement of the claims of the bondholders would be effected. The committee had submitted to her majesty's government a memorial drawn up by an eminent American statesman, whose knowledge of the American law and the law of nations had been invaluable to them, and had enabled them to lay a strong case before the government. In answer to a question, the chairman said the memorial had been presented to the government, who replied that the claims of the bondholders might be referred to the same tribunal as the Alabama claims. On the motion of Mr. Harris, seconded by Mr. King, the report was received and adopted. The following resolutions were then passed: That, as legal proceedings have been taken by the government of the United States to recover in English and French law courts property and money belonging to the late Confederate States, it is of the utmost importance that notice of counter claims should be immediately given on behalf of the seven per cent. cotton bondholders; that the bondholders' committee be furnished with the requisite funds to enable them to take legal proceedings as counsel may advise; and that no bonds be dealt in by the stock exchange unless stamped by the committee of the Confederate bondholders as having paid 1-16 per cent. to enable the committee to carry this resolution into effect." "That the holders of the seven per cent. cotton loan have committed no breach of international law by making advances to the southern states on the hypothecation of cotton, and the loan to the said states being a perfectly legal transaction, the bondholders hereby most solemnly protest against the injustice and illegality of the United States congress and the legislatures of the southern states passing any law to prejudice their rights and the contract made with such states, and that any such proceeding will be a direct violation of the law of nations, and fatal to the honor and financial credit of both the United States and southern states." A gentleman stated that the United States twenty-five bonds were not legal until they had received the confirmation of the southern states, and that probably a strong opinion to that effect, by eminent counsel, would be published ere long.

NEGRO SPEECHES.

A Mr. J. M. SIMMS (negro) has been lately speaking to a mixed black and white audience at Savannah. He thus expressed himself:

"I can't say that there is a living man whom I would thank for my liberty. We were free by the force of circumstances attending the late war, and by the providence of God. It has been said that unless we prove ourselves worthy we may lose what we have gained. No power on earth can enslave us again under this republic. We must elect men who have our prosperity at heart. We intend to elect colored men for aldermen, and to have colored policemen. We will take them on probation, and if they do not do right we will turn them out. We intend to have no more brutal policemen nor besotted mayors. White and black shall constitute our police. We will send to congress men who are loyal; and, so help me God, I will vote for no man to represent me in congress who is not blind to color. Don't trust a white man, for he is treacherous. It is safer to trust your own color. You've proved white men unworthy of trust, with but very few exceptions. But let them be assured we will be true to them and to ourselves."

He was followed by a negro preacher, the Rev. Mr. Campbell, who informed the negroes that the highest positions in the land were open to their children. Such language needs no comment.

[WESTERN ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORTS.]

FROM NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Senator Sherman addressed the union league last evening on the questions of the day, and said if congress had yielded to the counsels of Johnson the rebellion would not have been crushed and war would be desolating the country; it was, therefore, necessary to reorganize society at the south. He said he had a letter from Gov. Brown stating that the movement toward reconstruction was going on happily, and that the people would soon acquiesce in the measures of congress.

Mexican correspondence says that the reported defeat of Escobedo at Queretaro is untrue, and the liberals reported they had captured Puebla. Vera Cruz is so well defended by walls and forts, and mounted with heavy guns, it would be impossible for the liberals to take it by assault. Success might have been met with the first two hours after the French left, but the troops are now gaining confidence in their leaders, and it is impossible to tell how long the siege will last.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, April 11.—The Princess of Wales is at the point of death. Surgical operation upon the bone of her knee is necessary, but she cannot endure the pain and is too weak to take chloroform. The news is carefully kept from the public, and the Prince of Wales haunts the theaters as usual.

DUBLIN, April 11.—Patrick Conden, otherwise called Gen. Massey, has turned informer and is not indicted.

BERLIN, April 11.—Count Bismark sent an energetic note to Paris demanding of Napoleon his reasons for arming. He says Prussia holds France responsible for consequences of such a step, and asks instant cessation of warlike preparations.

RADSTADT, April 11.—The Prussian garrison of this fortress has been reinforced by two regiments.

STUTGARDT, April 11.—Orders have been sent from Berlin to the principal railway stations in Wurtemburg and Baden directing that cars be sent in for cavalry horses.

THE clipper ship General Grant, which sailed May 3d, from Melbourne for London, has never been heard from. She was a fine ship of 1,203 tons, built in Bath, Maine, in 1863, and owned in Boston. She was insured for $105,000.

SEVERAL San Francisco Hebrews were taken in and done for, lately, by a pretended alchemist, who plied his trade by melting gold coin and the "salting" of mining claims. He had pocketed $6,335 before his swindle was discovered. He was then arrested.

THE city engineer of Chicago, accompanied by three newspaper reporters, made a boat voyage through the lake tunnel a few days ago. Their boat filled with water, and all hands were obliged to perform considerable portion of the journey by wading in three feet of ice-cold water. One or two of the party nearly succumbed to the cold and exhaustion.

THE steamship Francis Wright, which sailed from New York for Key West in the service of the International ocean telegraph company, carried a corps of operators, linesmen and laborers, besides horses, wagons, forage and rations, to begin the operation of laying a cable from Key West to Havana. The company is under the management of Gen. Baldy Smith.

THE corner-stone of the new Roman Catholic cathedral of St. Patrick in Washington, was laid on Sunday with appropriate ceremonies, Archbishop Spaulding officiating. The estimated cost of the building is $300,000.

CAPT. WM. H. DORSEY, a citizen of Athens, Ga., twenty-one years, departed this life at his residence in that place on the 27th ult., aged about fifty-seven years.

THE New Orleans Cotton Market is fully as high as that of New York. The cost of having Cotton shipped from Memphis and sold in New Orleans is 2 cts. per pound. To have it shipped to the Eastern market costs 3 to 3½ cts per pound. Where instructions are given to sell on arrival the shipper to New Orleans gets account sales in eight days, and the shipper East in twenty to twenty-five days. The New Orleans market is not subject to the violent fluctuations of the Eastern markets as prices in the former city are more controlled by the Liverpool and Manchester quotations.

This company will restrict their business to FIRST CLASS RISKS. Policies issued from one month to six years. It is a HOME COMPANY pledged and devoted to the furtherance of HOME INTERESTS.

The mutual system has deservedly become the most popular mode of insurance in the United States, and is the one embraced by those best informed upon the subject, and who appreciate and desire security, perpetuity and economy. In a purely mutual company the assured derives all the advantages which can be realized from an insurance, and at the lowest rates, or exact cost, paying no tribute or profits to the proprietors or stockholders for, perhaps, an inadequate capital or security. Cheapness combined with security, and a certainty of accomplishing the object in view, are the essential elements sought for, and they may be found eminently existing in a well conducted mutual insurance company, and such a company the Incorporators and Officers propose for the Tennessee State Mutual. Full information will be furnished at the office of the company. There are SEVENTEEN mutual insurance companies in successful operation in St. Louis, covering by their policies SEVEN-EIGHTHS of the real estate of that city. Such is the popularity of the mutual principle in our sister city. ap4 1m

JOHN S. C. HOGAN & CO.

SOLDIERS AND CIVILIANS.

Either one's obstinacy or the convictions of his reason must be very strong, to induce him to maintain his own opinions in respect to reconstruction, against those of men who led the armies of the Confederacy in the field, and made the new flag dreaded on the ocean. No one is unaware of the potency of great and illustrious names, nor of the fact that he is likely to be accused, if he does not accuse himself, of presumption, when he ventures to disagree, in discussing what a conquered people owes to itself, and what is wisest for it to do, with a BEAUREGARD, a LONGSTREET or a SEMMES.

It is very true that many great Soldiers have proven themselves equally great as Statesmen and in civil administration. Of this, NAPOLEON and WELLINGTON in Portugal are striking examples. A correspondent of the Avalanche has given us the whole list of men who have been so distinguished, including in it several of whom it can only be said that perhaps they would have been as great in peace as in war, or in war as in peace, if the double opportunity had been afforded them. Such were CALHOUN, CHATHAM, PITT, RICHELIEU and GREGORY VII. To know that a man has been doubly great, is much more satisfactory in such an argument, than to guess that he would have been so if he had had the opportunity. It is notorious that the greatest lawyers have made very indifferent legislators and Statesmen. ERSKINE made no reputation in the House of Commons. Of all our American legislators, CLAY was the one who would most probably have made a great General. It is quite certain that WEBSTER, as a General, would have been a failure, and we venture to dissent from the opinion of the correspondent of the Avalanche as to CALHOUN. Nor do we agree with him that MARLBOROUGH, MONK and TURENNE were great civil Statesmen.

The great soldiers of the world have rarely been great in civil life. That has been the case with only a few. Of all NAPOLEON'S Marshals, none were so distinguished, and the greatest of them, MASSENA and NEY, were the least so of all. If any one was so, it was SOULT, Duke of Dalmatia. CAMBACERES, TALLEYRAND and METTERNICH, were the three great Statesmen of that age; and neither of them had the qualities of a great General. As little had NAPIER the qualities of a statesman.

Of all our soldiers, we deem Gen. LEE to be best fitted for a Statesman; for he is patient, prudent and sagacious, and yet bold and venturous enough when the moment comes to strike. The wisest of our Statesmen, we think, would make indifferent Captains.

The question presented to the people of the South for their decision is one of so great difficulty, and as to which there may well be opinions so diametrically opposite, that no one ought to undervalue the statesmanship of those whose opinion is adverse to his own, or still less impugn their honesty and patriotism. Unfortunately, it is in respect to questions of the greatest doubt, and where one should most distrust the soundness of his own convictions on either side, that men are most intolerant.

It is quite sure that a good defensive war ought to partake of the offensive, but it is also sure that to take the offensive with any prospect of success, one must possess the means of aggression, that his movement may not end in disaster. During the war, those Editors who had mistaken their vocation, and should have wielded the sword instead of the quill, were continuously urging an offensive system of warfare, which was adopted by movements into Kentucky, Pennsylvania and Maryland, that ruined the Confederate cause.

We fail to see the possibility of any offensive strategy on our part. LEE might as well have been told of the value of it, when his means even of defense were exhausted, and he was surrounded by immensely superior forces, that left him no option but to surrender. The only choice left to us, is, whether we shall submit to whatever government power chooses to impose on us, refusing to admit that our State Constitutions have been annulled, refusing to agree to negro suffrage, refusing to admit that the Government is not a Compact between the States, refusing to disfranchise our leaders, refusing to brand ourselves as rebels and traitors, and reserving the right hereafter to undo all that the despotism of numbers may do to enslave and degrade us, and to substitute the wildest anarchy for the orderly and harmonious workings of a republican government guaranteed by the sovereignty of the States and the intelligence and virtue of the Electors; or whether we shall become parties to all this, and make it our own work. The question is not whether we shall adopt the 'defensive-passive' or the 'defensive-active,' but whether we shall surrender at discretion, and ourselves give the coup de grace to the cause we fought for, or simply submit without unavailing resistance and impotent struggles. The former seems to us not to be the defensive-active, but very active submission.

We know the force upon the popular mind of the argumentum ad hominem and ad captandum, that none can be more competent to judge whether a particular course is consistent with individual self-respect and the honour of the State, than the leaders of the armies of the Confederacy. As all must have the utmost confidence in their patriotism and integrity, so those holding opposite opinions ought to listen to their arguments with sincere deference, and carefully review the processes of reasoning by which they had themselves attained their conclusions. We have done so; and upon the whole matter, and with unfeigned respect for the opinions of those from whom we dissent, we must adhere to our own convictions. The history of the world, and especially of our own country, shows that it has been by the authority of great names that Nations have been led into the most fatal of their mistakes. The Proclamation of General JACKSON was the most deadly blow ever aimed at the sovereignty of the States and the permanency of our Constitutional system.

If the object to be attained by registration and voting, on the part of the true men of the South, is to prevent the adoption of Constitutions by the Conventions, or their ratification by the people, that would be indeed the "defensive-active," and resistance instead of submission.

If the object be to prevent the incorporation in the new Constitution of the odious features required by the enactments of Congress, that would equally be resistance; because such Constitutions, even if ratified by the popular vote, would not comply with the act of Congress, or be approved by it, and so would not gain us admission into the Union. Not to comply with the conditions imposed by Congress would be the same thing as to make no Constitution at all. We do not object to that.

But those who urge the people to action and co-operation do not propose that they shall prevent the work of reconstruction; but that they shall assist in and facilitate it, and become co-authors of new Constitutions complying fully and fairly with the prescribed conditions. And it is as certain as any thing can be, that if the supporters of the Confederate cause, who are not disfranchised, do yield to what they deem necessity, and under any plea or pretext whatever unite in electing delegates, the end of it will be compliance with the conditions. The very ground on which they are urged to act is, that Constitutions so complying with the terms dictated, will be made, whether they co-operate or refuse to act; and that therefore they ought to co-operate, in order to diminish the mischief, and make the Constitutions as little objectionable as possible. It is suggested that they may so prevent the general disfranchisement under which we suffer here in Tennessee, and limit the denial of the right of suffrage to those disfranchised by the reconstruction acts.

If any are to be disfranchised, it is better that all should be; because a general disfranchisement cannot continue long, while a partial one will be permanent, permanently disgracing those who consent to it as to their leaders, to secure the right of voting for themselves. If we permit the 'loyalists' and negroes to make the Constitution, their works will be short-lived; the sooner annihilated, because the more odious.

"The business of constancy," MONTAIGNE says, "chiefly is, bravely to stand to and stoutly to suffer those inconveniences which are not to be avoided."

When the Philistine Lords, in the Samson Agonistes of MILTON, summoned the blind Hebrew Hero to make them sport at the Temple of Dagon, and he refused

"To condescend to such absurd commands,' saying,

"Do they not seek occasion of new quarrels,
On my refusal to distress me more,
Or make a game of my calamities,"

and refusing to

"Add a greater sin
By prostituting holy things to idols . . .
The worst of all indignities, ...
Joined with extreme contempt;"

the chorus said to him,

"Where the heart joins not, outward acts defile not:"

but he replied in these noble words:

"Where outward force constrains, the sentence holds.
But who constrains me to the Temple of Dagon,
Not dragging? The Philistian Lords command.
Commands are no restraints. If I obey them,
I do it freely, venturing to displease
God for the fear of man, and man prefer,
Set God behind: which in His jealousy
Shall never, unrepented, find forgiveness."

MISSISSIPPI IN CHANCERY.

We have now carefully read the bill proposed to be filed in the name of the State of Mississippi, by Judge SHARKEY and ROBERT J. WALKER, praying the Supreme Court to annul the Reconstruction Act and Supplement, and the argument of the former jurisconsult upon the question attempted to be raised by the bill.

Our opinion of the bill itself is confirmed. In a somewhat long course of practice in Courts of Equity, we have never chanced to see exactly such a 'critter'; and it will be readily supposed that we have seen some very queer productions of ambitious lawyerlings. The facts are in the bill; but so is the argument of counsel, interjected here and there, in a fashion that must be novel to the Supreme Court of the United States,—the State sometimes addressing itself to that Court, and then subsiding into the distance to enable the counsel to argue and expostulate with, and admonish and instruct the Court, in respect to sundry principles of law.

The argument of Judge SHARKEY is dextrous and able,—dextrous, chiefly, in evading the strong points against him, and arguing those that needed no argument at all,—able, because it is strictly a legal argument, making the very utmost of the case. Of course, if Mississippi is a State in the Union, her rights cannot be abridged, nor can her republican government be destroyed, as it is, and a military government established over her. That the reconstruction bills are null, follows as a matter of course, from the fact that the State of Mississippi is a State. Establish that the people of Mississippi have any rights under the Constitution, and it is impossible to deny the illegality and enormity of the acts of Congress. If Mississippi is a State, not in the Union, but having a perfect and complete present right to be received into it, Congress has the discretionary power to permit or delay its admission, and the Judicial power cannot hasten it. But if it is a State in the Union; if it never was out of the Union, it is enough to state the legislation of Congress, or silently point the Court to it, without argument. One might as well labour to demonstrate that a man has no right to murder or rob, as that the United States cannot establish an absolute military despotism over a State actually in the Union.

By the bill, the State of Mississippi is made to claim that she never separated from the other States; that it was impossible for her to do so; and that her ordinance of secession was null and void. The whole is, for the State, a humiliating record. No one, who is of a generous spirit, will upbraid her in her calamity: but there are many who honoured her for the gallantry of her legions, who will deeply regret that she has been made to say that her people were all rebels, but she remained all the time in the Union: for, if she did so, her sons fought against her also, as one of the United States, and were undeniably guilty of treason.

The Northern journals all predict that the Supreme Court will decide that it has no jurisdiction of the case made by the bill. That is our opinion also. A State never had any remedy, by judicial proceeding, for a violation of the Constitutional Compact by other States, or for any aggression on its rights by the General Government. But do these journals see, that to say this is to make it necessary to admit the right of withdrawal by a State from a Union in which its rights had no protection, and when it could not appeal to the judicial power of the nation, even if a military despotism were established over it. Not being bound to submit to such a despotism,—nay, being bound by the most solemn obligations of duty to resist it, it must necessarily judge for itself, and by separation or otherwise right itself.

The legislation of the last two years has completely justified the Southern States for their endeavor to attain political independence. If the popular majority, the populace of the Northern States, can, by their representatives in Congress, change the Constitution at pleasure, and concentrate in their hands all the powers of Government, it was wise and right in the South to strive to free itself from what was servitude in disguise.

Southern Relief.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 7.—An enthusiastic meeting was held here last night to aid the destitute people of the southern states. Gov. Lowe presided, and over $10,000 was subscribed. Arrangements are being made to make collections throughout the Pacific states. The express, railroad and telegraph companies have offered their services free.

The Cincinnati Enquirer says:

We confess we do not belong to that body of northern politicians—calling themselves democrats—who are using their influence to persuade the people of the south to lie down under this despotism, reconstruct their institutions according to the congressional programme, confess themselves the miscreants they are described in the radical nomenclature, and kiss the rod while it is descending upon their backs, for the sake of sending delegates to congress, and voting at the next presidential election.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Speech of Gov. Orr at Charleston—He Denounces the Democratic Party.

At a meeting of the Charleston board of trade, April 2d, Gov. Orr made a long speech upon reconstruction, from which we quote the following:

The act of congress, recently passed, has assumed that this country is a conquered territory, a conquered people, and consequently that that body has a right to dictate terms. The power exists in that body to dictate those terms; it is secure for the next two years, and when they place themselves squarely and broadly upon that platform, I for one, do not propose to go to the supreme court or anywhere else for the purpose of disputing that power; but in good faith I will accept the terms, humiliating as they may be, and openly, fairly, and squarely urge their adoption before our people. [Great applause.] As I have said to you, these terms are humiliating, and, in many respects, ungenerous and unjust, but when congress exercise their power in spite of the president of the United States, and without regard to the constitution, which has in vain been held up to them for the last eighteen months, I see no other course for us to adopt as a matter of interest than to yield. I happen to be one of that class of persons that are disfranchised now, henceforth and forever. With reference to the disfranchising clause, I think it was an unfortunate one. According to an estimate made in the region of country in which I reside, it appears that within the limits of Anderson district alone about eighteen hundred persons would be excluded from the privilege of voting. I presume that this rule will apply to the entire state of South Carolina. Very many of these persons excluded enjoy the esteem, respect and confidence of their fellow-citizens. Many of them, indeed, are, in my humble judgment, required in the formation of our state government. And the absence of these gentlemen in your convention, when it assembles for the purpose of preparing a constitution, will be a source not only of regret to the people, but a misfortune to the state. I would, therefore, say to every man in South Carolina, who has not been disfranchised, that as soon as the proper order has been issued, he should proceed to register his name, and prepare to go to the polls to vote for the best man that can be selected to form a constitution under which we and our posterity can live. I believe that congress made a mistake, and they will realize it, when they extend suffrage to the colored man. As some of these remarks are likely to go in print, I would here take occasion to say one or two things which I desire to go upon the record. When the emissary comes here from the state of New York, Massachusetts or Ohio, and says to the black man, "we are your friends; we are going to take care of you; vote with us; these white people cannot be trusted;" I want our colored men to say to these emissaries, to the Massachusetts men, that in South Carolina, under this law, it matters not by whom it was passed, every colored man, twenty-one years of age, is entitled to the ballot, and that he would not be allowed to vote in Massachusetts unless he could read and write. Say to the emissary of Ohio who comes here for the purpose of giving advice as to how you shall vote, go back to Ohio and enlighten the heathen there, before you come here, because no black man there is entitled to vote. Within the last three weeks, New Jersey, Ohio, and Michigan have resolved that the black man shall not vote under any circumstances whatever. I know there is an apprehension wide-spread in the north and west that, after the reconstruction of the southern states, we shall fall into the arms of our old allies and associates, the old democratic party. I say to you, gentlemen, however, that I would give no such pledges. We have accounts to settle with that party, gentlemen, before I, at least, will consent to affiliate with it. [Good, good, and applause.] Many of you well remember that when the war first commenced, great hopes and expectations were held out by our friends in the north and west, that there would be no war, and that if it commenced it would be north of Mason's and Dixon's line, and not in the south. You know, sir, (turning to Gen. Sickles,) that faith was pledged, and I will now state that if that faith had been properly carried out, there is no probability that any state but South Carolina would have seceded from the federal union. Again, during the pendency of the constitutional amendment, every northern newspaper, and almost every democrat in the country, urged upon the south to reject its provisions. It was rejected. A few weeks only elapsed, and yet we find that on the passage of this Sherman bill, our democratic friends, acting in conjunction with old Thad. Stevens, were instrumental in incorporating on that bill its most odious features. It went back to the senate, was finally adopted, and every one of the democratic newspapers all over the north, so far as I am informed, have come out and urged the southern people to accept the bill. I say to you, therefore, that in my judgment it is time for us to seek new friends and a new alliance.

FALSEHOOD EXPOSED.

A short time ago, when the reconstruction measures, so-called, were before congress, the revolutionary demagogues therein literally howled forth denunciations of the alleged wide-sweeping crime in the south. No northern man could live there. That there was no ground for the statements is seen by such articles as the following, from the New York Tribune:

All our advices from the south indicate the prevalence of a very general desire to invite and encourage immigration and settlement. A year or so ago, there were reservations and conditions stipulated—some preferred Germans, or at least Europeans; others were willing to receive even Yankees, if they would eschew offensive politics and "isms;" but now the general cry is, "Come and buy our lands; make homes and set to work among us; if you live honestly and soberly, we will make you welcome." Almost every one realizes that free labor requires and rewards a far denser population than those states have ever yet had—that quadruple their present numbers could find a generous, assured subsistence on their soil. The following overture, just unanimously passed by both houses of the Virginia legislature, presages a systematic effort to allure settlers from the North to rebuild the waste places of the "old dominion":

Resolved, That we hereby invite immigration, embracing all classes of men, from all countries, to Virginia, to settle her surplus lands and engage in all great industrial pursuits.

Resolved, That we earnestly recommend the citizens of Virginia to hold primary meetings in their respective counties, inviting immigration within their limits, and to appoint a principal agent in each, through whom communication may be held respecting land offered for sale.

Resolved, That Gen. Daniel Ruggles, of Fredericksburg, is hereby recommended as a gentleman well qualified to induce immigration to the state, and with whom communication by county agents is respectfully requested.

We hope soon to hear that a general office has been opened at Richmond or elsewhere, at which information may be had of every tract of land for sale in the state, its character, capacities, etc. Other states will doubtless follow.

THE STARVATION CASE—THE THIRTY-FIFTH DAY OF ABSTINENCE.

From the Dayton (O.) Journal, 5th inst.

The case of Mr. B. M. Brown, to which we referred a few days since, attracts a good deal of attention here. A number of persons have called to see Mr. B., and conversed with him. He is glad to see company, and though reduced to skin and bones, shows no abatement in the strength of his voice, nor of confidence in the faithfulness of his guardian angels.

It is now thirty-five days since Mr. Brown has tasted food, as he avers and his wife declares. All who have visited him express their conviction of the truth of his statement. He does not appear to grow weaker as his fast continues, but is able to sit up for a short time every day, after being supported from his bed to his chair. He is not able to stand without assistance. His emaciated and cadaverous appearance contrasts strangely with his full, strong voice and animated manner while conversing with visitors.

He continues to express full faith in the guardianship of four spirits, who are constantly with him, and who supply him with etherial nutriment distilled from the pure air of heaven. When questioned as to the effect of his protracted fasting, he usually replies, that so far from feeling the distress and pain which ordinarily result in the progress of starvation, he not only suffers no pain, but has had positive physical and mental enjoyment since he ceased eating. His couch, instead of being wearisome, is like a bed of down, from which he rises with regret. His condition, in fact, he describes as one of unalloyed happiness.

When asked if he is conscious of any reason why he should be required to go through such a process of starvation, which to most persons would be so fearful, his answer is, that his guardian angels refuse to give him any other satisfaction when he puts the question to them, than that it is necessary for his good, and the reason will be given him when his pilgrimage closes. He professes no knowledge as to the duration of the time yet allotted him—but whether his life shall close in an hour, or be protracted for days, he waits the issue patiently.

It is very desirable that some medical gentlemen should investigate this extraordinary case.

RUSSELL county, Va., will export this year thirty thousand dollars worth of mules and twenty thousand dollars worth of horses and cattle.

THE HEROES OF THE LOCOMOTIVE.

Appreciative Tribute to Railroad Engineers.

President Tuttle, of Wabash college, Indiana, in the New York Independent, thus celebrates the merits of a class of every-day heroes, whose watchful guardianship, though absolutely necessary to the personal safety of every individual who sets foot on a railroad train, is not always remembered:

It may be an admission of weakness, and yet I confess to a high admiration of a class of men to whom a vast burden of responsibility in the matter of human life is constantly intrusted. I refer to our railroad engineers. The locomotive in itself is a marvel of ingenuity and power. Compact, perfect in form and adaption, indispensable to the wants of civilization, it is one of the finest instruments. The man who controls those thirty tons of organized iron which we call a locomotive must secure both self-respect and self-confidence. I have sometimes stood beside the track when a train has come flying along, and have observed with boundless admiration the man on whose vigilance, skill and pluck the safety of that train so largely depended. His left hand on the lever, his right on the reversing lever—if that be its name—his body bent forward eagerly, and his eyes keenly scrutinizing the track ahead, lest the tremendous momentum of his train, coming in contact with some obstacle, should dash itself in an instant into a horrible wreck. How, now, can a man be weighed down with such a responsibility and not be a stronger and more self-reliant man?

Some years ago, with a party, it was my fortune to be on the Erie railway when the engineers engaged in a general strike. I sided with the engineers, believing them to be wronged. At the Susquehanna station we found a large body of engineers, more than I had ever seen together at one time. They were not noisy, nor braggart, nor tipsy; but I then said, what I now believe, that they were the finest body of operatives I ever saw. Intelligent, bold, strong, each the manager of such a wonderful machine, they found at least one ardent admirer that day.

Some of the most remarkable exhibitions of courage have been made by men of this class. A few years ago my friend Orsbone, who has driven the locomotive for the [illegible] train on the Morris and Essex railroad for twenty years at least, with faultless faithfulness, was once delayed by snow on the track for several hours, but received explicit orders from the superintendent—not that splendid officer who has lately resigned his office on that road—"to go ahead," for the road was clear, no other train was on the track. After satisfying himself that he had not misunderstood the order, he left the summit on a steep down-grade, and, in rounding a sharp curve, came on a train that was ascending the same grade under full head of steam. In an instant he whistled down the brakes and reversed his engine. The noble thing, under such a tremendous strain, as if fully aware of the danger, obeyed, and threw itself back to avert the catastrophe. Meanwhile the other engineer had done the same thing with his locomotive; but it was possible only to modify the shock.

Together rushed these two panting and reluctant giants, their joint weight not less than sixty tons, with the gathered momentum of their following trains. They rose like two furious animals in fight, standing on end, and in a trice the two splendid machines were a wreck. The cars behind them were also badly crushed. Osborne did not leap from his engine, but, never moving his hands from the lever which controled it, he stood as resolute as a rock at his post until the shock came, and then, quick as thought, adjusted his valves to allow the steam to escape without an explosion. Our war can furnish no clearer proof of the finest courage than that.

At the crossing of the Morris & Essex railway and Orange turnpike may be seen a flagman with one leg. The other he lost in the wreck I have just described. Had he had Orsbone's nerve to face danger he would have escaped also unhurt. Poor fellow! The man who issued the presumptuous blunder that day tried to buy him off from prosecuting the company for the sum of one hundred dollars, an offer which poor Bob's wife met with this query: "Mr. ——, would you sell one of your legs for a hundred dollars?"

During the war an incident occurred on the Pennsylvania Central which was related to me by an eye-witness. My informant was with a regiment of soldiers going from Pittsburg to Harrisburg in a special train. Between Johnstown and the summit they were delayed by a freight train off the track, or a part of its cars off. This they learned at one of the stations, and remained there until they should be informed that the track was clear. It was in the night, and most of the thousand men on the train were asleep, unconscious of their danger. Four heavily loaded coal-cars belonging to the train ahead had, by accident, become detached, and began the descent of a heavy grade at a speed which soon became terrible. The engineer of the special train heard the roar of the descending cars, and surmised what was the matter. Instantly, he ordered his engine to be detached from the train and put on steam to meet the runaway cars, if possible, to break their force and save his train. His locomotive was a large freight, and he had moved several rods ahead when the coal cars struck him like a thunderbolt, and crushed his engine back on the train; but his heroic courage had saved many lives. His engine was utterly demolished, and many of his cars were also crushed; but so had he broken the force of the shock that no lives were lost. The man's name was Story, and his grateful beneficiaries presented him some elegant silver plate, with the deed itself and their names engraved on them. When asked why he did not abandon his train, he replied: "Quick as lightning, I thought I had better die than to have those runaway cars cut clean through my train, destroying hundreds." It was a heroic answer.

Let me relate one more incident in the same line. That part of the Marietta and Cincinnati railroad between Athens and the Ohio river was formerly made famous by the number of its long and high trestle bridges. With few exceptions, these are now filled up, and the road is becoming one of the best. At one time the company were in great straits, and many of their operatives were unpaid. Some of the men were desperate, and, as the facts proved, dangerous. On a certain evening a train was approaching one of these trestle bridges. It was known that the directors of the road were aboard, and some villain had determined to throw the whole train from that bridge. The engineer, letting his train move at the ordinary speed, suddenly discovered that a rail had been displaced on the bridge. He seemed to know instinctively that the momentum was too great to save the whole train, and he signaled the breaks down and reversed the engine, to stop, if possible, the cars before reaching the chasm. Then, opening the throttle-valve, the engine sprang forward so violently as to break the connection with the train, and dashed to the awful leap. The bold man, as this was going on, ran out of his window on the engine and opened the escape-valve. While standing there the engine went over with him, and, marvelous to relate, he, falling under the huge weight, was preserved from being crushed by the engine bell at his side. The train, for the rescue of which he had exhibited such incredible pluck, stopped just soon enough to escape the horrible leap after the engine. This bold man's name I have not heard; but he recovered from his wounds, and is still an honored employe of the company.

We glorify our heroes of the battlefield and the sea; we stand all agog with admiration if some foolish man or more foolish woman ascends Mont Blanc just for the name of the feat; we may talk about Alexander and Bucephalus, and Cæsar in the boat in the tempest—why may not my humble pen glorify the heroes of the locomotive engine, who exhibit as noble and praiseworthy a daring as any heroes in other fields? And they do this in the constant service of the thousands of families who every hour of the twenty-four are represented on the railways of the world. All honor to the heroes of the engine, and "ten thousand times ten thousand," if they could, would respond "Amen."

St. Joseph, Missouri.

Special Dispatch to the St. Louis Republican.

ST. JOSEPH, April 9.—Persons in from Denver report the weather becoming quite moderate on the plains. No snow between here and Fort Kearney, and under the influence of several days of warm sunshine the grass is beginning to start.

A large train loaded with groceries and provisions left here to-day for Denver.

The river is open to Omaha, the ice having given way at that point a few days ago. The regular packets plying between here and there have entered on their season's work in earnest, and go out crowded with passengers.

The estimated aggregate of gold from Montana for the year 1867 is $36,000,000.

The market rates for provisions are very little higher in Helena than at many points on the river. Flour retails at $9@12 50; bacon 50c; sugar 35@40c; coffee 40. Soap seems to be elevated, and is quoted at 30@65c.

New Steamship Line.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 7.—The California Steam Navigation and California, Oregon, and Mexico Steamship companies have obtained a withdrawal of the Anchor line.

On the Oregon steamship route the price of freight has been raised to the old figures.

The leading bankers and capitalists of the city have purchased the steamships Idaho, Montana, and Oragonian, for the purpose of placing a line in opposition to the steamers for New York via Panama. It is understood the vessels already make the connection on the Atlantic side.

THE PATENT AURORA OIL!

WE want men everywhere to study their OWN INTEREST. The right to manufacture and sell the Patent Aurora Oil in a single county will make more money to the purchaser in three months than the largest farm in your State will make in a whole year. The Aurora Oil actually costs less than one-half the price of Coal Oil, and the illuminating power of the Aurora Oil is as much superior to the Coal Oil as the Coal Oil is to a tallow candle, and is no MORE explosive than a tallow candle. Any Lamp that will burn Coal Oil will burn the Aurora Oil. It does not smoke the chimney—it does not smell—it will not grease or stain the finest linen, not even white cloth. The material for its manufacture is inexhaustible. One man can make 75 bbls. per day. No machinery required. We will pay your fare to and from the city of Memphis, and bills while here, if we cannot prove all, and even more, than we have stated. A single County is a small fortune to the man of enterprise, and the right to a State is untold worth.

RELIGIOUS NOTICE.—"The anti-Jewish insurance companies considered from a moral point of view." A lecture on this subject will be delivered at the Main street synagogue this (Saturday morning at half-past nine o'clock, by the Rev. S. Tuska.

NEW UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS.—Col. Charles S. Cameron and Mr. Reuben Daily were appointed as United States commissioners for the district of West Tennessee.

COW STOLEN.—Some slow thieves forced open the stable of T. B. McEwen, Esq., No. 397 Adams street, on Thursday night, and stole a very valuable cow and calf, valued at $125. Information has been given to the authorities, but no trace of the animal has been found.

HUNGRY.—A warrant was issued yesterday, by 'Squire Hall, for the arrest of two men named Thomas Curlin and Archy McCarver, charged with beating a colored man and biting his ear off, on the old Raleigh road, near the fair ground. They will be examined this morning.

OVERCHARGING.—The repeated fines which have been imposed on drivers of hacks and express wagons does not seem to have entirely abated the evil, as one Tim Sullivan charged a man twenty dollars for taking him from the Memphis and Charleston depot to a steamer, for which he was fined fifty dollars yesterday. Of course he appealed.

CRIMINAL COURT.—In the case of S. B. Beaumont the judge sustained the motion of the defendant's counsel, to appoint a constable for the special purpose of obtaining a jury in this case, thus sustaining the allegation that the sheriff and his deputies are prejudiced in this case.

GONE BACK.—A veteran negro mule thief, who has been practicing his nefarious calling in the vicinity of Hernando, Miss., was captured near this city on Thursday night with a mule, the property of R. C. Irwin, in his possession. Both were sent back yesterday, where no doubt the thief will be properly dealt with.

THE MASHER.—The irrepressible Riley is out again, with his cast-iron dish rag and beefsteak masher. It is truly a wonderful invention, and worthy the genius of him who vends it at our corners. Riley, to amuse the crowd which always gathers around him, relates tales of his perils during the war as a Confederate soldier, and his adventures as an actor. He deserves patronage for his inventive genius and industry.

THE CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.—This paper, edited by Rev. W. C. Johnson, is the organ of the Memphis and Arkansas conferences of the Methodist Episcopal church south. It comes out in an enlarged form and presents a good appearance. It is well filled with general reading, religious matter and correspondence and must be a welcome guest in the family circle.

A NET THIEF.—An enterprising colored thief, named Andy White, was arrested yesterday on a warrant issued by Justice Creighton, charged with stealing a fishing net, the property of Mr. E. Manthie, an honest, hard working fisherman. As the water is falling, Andy no doubt wanted to embark in business for himself. He will come before the squire to-day to answer for his deed in the premises.

THE STREETS.—The last few days of gentle spring breezes and sunshine have tended to render some of the streets passable; but Second street, near the Greenlaw opera house, Madison, near the bridge, and DeSoto street, are sadly in want of immediate repair. These traps might be filled with stone for the present, so as to make them passable, but we have long since despaired of our present rulers taking any action in so important a matter.

LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN SCHOOL.—We call attention to the advertisement of the summer session of this institution, which has now been in successful operation for a year. The late principal, Rev. E. F. Williams, having resigned, his place is to be filled by Rev. Mr. Bancroft, a graduate of Dartmouth college, who comes highly recommended as an experienced and successful teacher. This school offers excellent facilities for a thorough education at unusually moderate cost. Aside from educational advantages, the summit of the grand old mountain is capital for youth to spend the hot summer months.

DENTAL SOCIETY.—The central states dental society have been holding meetings in this city for some days, and adjourned yesterday. About fifty delegates were present, and their meetings were characterized by harmony and good feeling. Many measures were discussed, among which were those of the best material and modes of filling the teeth, with other matters of interest not only to the profession but those requiring their services. Dr. Redman was president, and Dr. W. H. Shadoan secretary, both of Louisville, Ky. Delegates were elected to attend the great national convention of dentists to be held in Cincinnati in July. The members of the central states convention propose keeping up their local society for the purpose of elevating the standard of their profession. We wish them success. It was our pleasant privilege to meet some of the members from a distance, and we hope again to have the pleasure of greeting them in the Bluff city.

CAUGHT AT LAST.—It may be remembered that the grocery of Mr. Clarke, on Jones avenue, near the Winchester cemetery, was robbed of a quantity of groceries and provisions some days since, when the negro thieves were pursued and a portion of the property recovered. Mr. Clarke, by keeping careful watch and making diligent inquiry, learned the whereabouts of the thieves, and procuring warrants from John C. Creighton, Esq., and securing the services of his efficient deputy constable, James Lynch, went in pursuit of the thieves, and succeeded in capturing all three of them, not without some difficulty, however. One of the thieves gave Clarke and Lynch a lively chase, but they were too fleet of foot for the long heel, and overtook him. He still resisted, but was overpowered. Two were taken inside the city and the other about three miles from town. A further portion of the goods was recovered, but Mr. Clarke is still the loser to the amount of one hundred dollars. The three negroes, named respectively John Miller, Dick Jones and Elijah Peters, were lodged in the county jail, and will come up before the justice on the sixteenth for examination.

An Immense variety of new trimmings at Moffatt's.

OLD AND YOUNG.

Quite a Romantic Affair.

Love and marriage are truly wonderful affairs, and often strangely brought about. The Milwaukee Wisconsin tells the following:

"Many years ago there lived in New York city a young couple, moving in the first circles of society, who loved with devotion and earnestness. They awoke one morning the happiest couple in existence, for they were engaged and very soon were to be united for life—to live only for each other. They went to sleep that night the most miserable beings in existence, for during the day they had quarreled, a trivial matter had caused harsh words and hard words had caused a separation. Hereafter their paths were to be different in life. Trivial as was their quarrel it caused a separation for life, and much as they loved, henceforth they were to be nothing to each other. The busy world bustled on, and the trivial difficulty grew to such wide proportions that the young couple were further and further apart, until, if they ever thought of each other or ever met, it was as comparative strangers, and finally new attractions sprang up before them. We know not if they ever forgot the attractions which had made them once believe they were all the world to each other, but we do not know that their loves became centered upon new objects, and both were married, and perhaps in the excitements and trials of their new positions, forgot each other. The lady with her husband left the metropolis and came west, and to Milwaukee. Time passed on, and the lady was the subject of its vicissitudes. A few months ago found her the center of a large circle of friends and acquaintances, a widow with an only child a beautiful and idolized daughter. Only in the possession of such a daughter and such friends was she wealthy, yet she has sighed not for this world's goods, for she was happy. It may be that every trace of the early love had departed from her mind, when one day she received a letter. The hand-writing looked like an old but forgotten acquaintance, and it may be believed she read the letter with no little interest, yet with less enthusiasm than her eye had run over missives penned by the same hand in years gone by. The letter was from the early love, and it told his story. He launched his bark upon the waves of wedded life to find them tempestuous. After years of marriage he had separated from her, and a decree of the court had declared them twain flesh. Mean while the world had prospered gaily with him, and all of its goods that he desired were his. He had learned that she was not wealthy, and he had written to ask if it would be distasteful to her to receive at his hands a slight present. After consultation with her friends, the lady answered that she would have no hesitation in accepting it. In a short time they came. A prodigal hand had prepared them, and they came in abundance. Presents for the mother and for the daughter—presents that a princess would not disdain. In reply, the daughter sent a note of thanks for the mother. She was a highly educated young lady, and her reply, no doubt, was one well fitting for the occasion. A charming letter, overflowing with the thankfulness which her heart dictated. It caused a reply, and from this reply sprang a correspondence, continued for some time—friendly letters. In one of the letters the gentleman stated that he was coming west on business, and asked if he might make a friendly call when he did so. To such a friend who could say nay? We are assured the ladies did not, and when he came he met a kindly reception. The gentleman was pleased with the mother—but he was charmed with the daughter. He was yet young, or if not yet young, hale and hearty. He had tasted the bitters of married life, and as one visit was followed by many, and his contemplated visit of a few days lengthened to weeks, his mind had full time for the revolution of that sad problem, "It might have been." The new acquaintance was not deadened by the thought of the olden time, but that rather added to it a charm and pleasure. They met one day. Talked of everything that came to their minds, and particularly of the daughter, over whose head eighteen summers had lightly left their mark, a sweetly charming girl, whom one could meet only to admire—admire only to love. The fires of youth were not dead, but only slumbered in the heart of the gentleman. To the mother he praised the virtues and graces of the child, and surprised her by praying for permission to pay his suit to that daughter. The mother knew the heart of her child and felt that it would be no vain suit, and she readily gave her consent. The daughter had already learned to love the friend of her mother's early days, and her answer made the gentleman young again—made him feel that there was something else in this world but dark and gloomy pages. They have left us now and gone to dwell in their eastern home—a more than happy pair, devoted to each other—loving with all of love.

NEW MEMPHIS THEATER.—We do not remember, during the present season, to have seen such an array of beauty and fashion in this favorite place of amusement as filled the New Memphis last night on the occasion of the benefit of Mrs. D. P. Bowers. The seats were all filled, and standing room very scarce. Marston's comedy of Love's Masquerade was repeated. This piece, written expressly for Mrs. Bowers, is one peculiarly suited to her style. It is the story of every day life—courtship, love, misunderstanding, jealousy, and at last, of course, a happy reunion. Mrs. Bowers as the princess "Diana" came fully up to the standard of a finished actress, and displayed the several emotions incident to the character as only an artiste can. The "Don Cæsar" of Mr. Collum was a finished piece of acting. He never, even in the trying love scene, for what might be called the "mastery of hearts," losing his self-possession, or changing countenance wrongfully. Mr. Drayton appears to much advantage in "Perin," and when necessary fairly walks upon springs. In the fourth act, his acting, more than his speeches, (which by the way were well spoken,) elicited much applause. The minor characters were well personated, the piece was excellently put on the stage, the garden scene at the close of the third act, was particularly good. Manager Thompson deserves the thanks of the lovers of legitimate amusements, for producing such attractions at the New Memphis Theater.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT AND DISTRICT COURTS.—But little was done in these courts yesterday. In the case of Moore & Co. vs. P. T. Hughes, the judgment of the court overruling the motion for a new trial was reconsidered, and a new trial granted. In the case of Biddle vs. Pillow, in which a demurer to the plea of defendant was argued on Thursday by counsel, the court sustained the demurer, giving defendant until the August rules to file a new plea. This case is probably destined to be of considerable importance, involves, as it does, interesting and important questions of international law. It is an action brought against Gen. Gideon J. Pillow, for goods taken by him during his command of Confederate forces in Tennessee, during the war. The defendant's plea, filed by Col. Haynes, set forth the facts and circumstances of the war, the exigencies and necessities of the case, and was a plea of confession and avoidance or justification. The court held that the plea was bad, and said that the facts of the case and the justification might be shown under the general issue. Both counsel in the case, viz: Col. McRae for plaintiff, and Col. Haynes and Gen. Chalmers for defendants, expressed their conviction that the case would go to the supreme court of the United States. D. M. Wilson, W. L. Duff, R. P. Duncan, and S. R. Gammon, were admitted to practice. In Wasson vs. steamer Zephyr, the party appealing was given five days to file appeal bonds. In Bradford vs. steamer Morning Star, the appeal bond was filed and approved. In Cowell & Kelly vs. steamer Raymond, the report of the clerk and commissioner was filed and affirmed. The court adjourned to the next term in course.

LAW COURT.—The following cases were disposed of yesterday:

T.
789. Judgment for plaintiff for $1000.
688. Judgment as of jury for $599 44.
689. Continued as on affidavit of plaintiff.
690. Same.

162. Information of two wash tubs, etc.; dismissed at costs of Nagley.
142. Handlan vs. Charleston, libel; dismissed at libellant's costs, (costs paid.)

THE COUNTY COURT.—This body still remains in session, but not doing much of anything for the public good. A great deal of talk, and that mostly in whispers.

FRANKLIN INSURANCE AND BANKING COMPANY.—Pursuant to public notice, a meeting of the creditors of the Franklin Insurance and Banking company was held at the Merchants' Exchange at four o'clock p.m., of the 12th inst., when John Ainslie, Esq., was, on motion, elected chairman. The chairman stated the object of the meeting to be to devise ways and means to secure the depositors of the Franklin Insurance and Banking company, and after paying a high compliment to the integrity and honor of its late president, Mr. S. D. McClure, called for an expression of the opinion of those interested. Many propositions were made, and after discussion, the following resolution was unanimously agreed to:

Resolved, That it appears from the facts now before us that it is not expedient to suffer the affairs of the Franklin insurance and banking company to go into liquidation; that its assets are sufficient to meet its liabilities, and that by reorganizing it anew, its creditors will be secured from loss, and sufficient capital secured to place it on a firm and solid footing.

A general consultation was then held, when the sense of the meeting being taken, the following paper was submitted and unanimously signed by the creditors present:

We, the creditors of the Franklin Insurance and Banking Company agree to subscribe the amounts due us in stock to said company. It is hereby understood that three-fourths of the amount represented as the liabilities shall be subscribed before the subscription is binding, and also that the mortgages and attachments shall be released, and the parties holding said mortgages and attachments shall come into this arrangement.

On motion, the following committee was appointed, to examine and report upon the affairs of the company at a meeting to be called by them, to-wit:

N. N. Brown, of Messrs. Jones, Brown & Co.; N. Ford, of Ford & Co.; J. Malatests; Julius Arnold, of Lindauer, Arnold & Co; E. T. Keel, of Keel & Co.

On motion, it was ordered that the paper for the signature of creditors be placed in the office of Messrs. S. R. Clarke & Co., in the building of the Franklin Insurance and Banking company, and that all the creditors thereof be invited to call and sign it.

On motion, the meeting adjourned.

JOHN AINSLIE, President.

Chapin & Co. have just received an elegant assortment of beautiful and splendid spring suits of the latest style, and spring goods of every description, which they propose to sell on the most reasonable terms. Mr. Chapin is a clever gentleman, who understands his business thoroughly, and we know will give the best of bargains. For a nice spring suit, go to Chapin's, 308½ Second street, near Monroe.

BE FASHIONABLE.—One might as well be out of the world as out of the fashion. To be fashionable we must dress well. At no place in Memphis can a better and more varied stock of clothing be found than at the store of Drake & Co., 277 Main street. Dress and business suits, gloves of all kinds, ties, collars, underclothes, "and all that sort of thing, you know, you know."

MEETING OF CONSERVATIVES.—The conservative citizens of Shelby county are invited to assemble at the courthouse (Greenlaw block), on Saturday evening, the 13th inst., at eight o'clock, for the purpose of making all necessary arrangements to send up a suitable delegation to the convention to be held at Nashville on the 16th inst. All men, without regard to color, are earnestly requested to meet us in convention, and unite in the great struggle for equal rights and the political safety of our state. Col. Sam. Tate has kindly tendered to delegates through-trip at half fare. Other roads will not be behind in like patriotic deeds.

Dr. Bernhardt Will Leave Us.—This distinguished gentleman, who has been stopping at the Overton hotel in our city for sometime, and during his stay made many remarkable and wonderful optical cures, we regret to learn, will leave Saturday, April 20th. We hope, however, he may be prevailed on to continue his sojourn, as we regard his presence among us as a blessing to the afflicted, and consider his services, in restoring injured occular vision to its pristine clearness, as a benefit to humanity in general. Will the community suffer him to depart without some testimonial adequate to his merits?

Dress Suits, at Drake's, 277 Main street.

We dropped in yesterday to see our old friend Mr. Waterhouse, at the Marble hall, 56 Adams street, and, in our opinion, he has as pleasant and tidy a saloon as there is in Memphis. Nothing is wanting to make gentlemen feel at home. Everything is conducted with perfect propriety. The liquors, wines, cigars and tobacco, are the best in town. The ale and beer cannot be surpassed in the world. Waterhouse greets all with a smile. Call and see him. apr13 2t

MEMPHIS APPEAL.

For the Appeal.]

ALONE.

Oh! the soundless depth of sadness, in that awful word "alone."
Oh! the ecstacy of madness; Oh! the deep, despairing groan.
Oh! the misery and torture to the soul's best, highest powers,
As we look into the future, through the weary, dreary hours,
As we gaze with straining vision, seeing brightest hopes all flown,
Hearing only in derision, that demoniac word "alone."
Oh! the agony of hearing, when we list for sounds of mirth,
That should quiet all our fearing, that should bind us fast to Earth,
Only in wild, bitter accents, turning every heart to stone,
The accur-ing, maddening cadence, that unearthly word "alone."
That beseeching, mournful wailing, like a sinner's dying moan,
That benumbing, unavailing, heartless, joyless word "alone."
In the midst of Earth's gay pleasures, in the endless round of joy,
When the brightest of Earth's treasures seem like sweets without alloy;
When the heart with sunshine gladdened, seems to misery yet unknown,
Suddenly the spirit, saddened, stricken, hears the word "alone."
Hears that weird and whispered sorrow, with its trembling, quivering tone,
Like a night that hath no morrow, that despairing word "alone."
Saddest of all Earth's sad tokens, to the trembling, beating heart,
Like a veil of night unbroken, which we strive in vain to part;
Folding ever closer, nearer, with its damp, oppressive breath,
Like the shroud in which the wearer sleeps the last, long sleep of death
Is the deep, oppressing sadness, deep within our spirits sown,
When, dispelling all our gladness, we have heard the word "alone."
Heard the pitiful, sad, sobbing, grieving gasping moan
Of that thrilling, sorrowing, throbbing, lightless, hopeless word—"Alone!"

MEMPHIS, April 7, 1867.

THE OLD MILL.

Don't you remember, Lily dear,
The mill by the old hill side,
Where we used to go in the summer time
And watch the foamy tide;
And toss the leaves of the fragrant beech,
Oh its breast so smooth and bright,
Where they floated away like emeralds,
In a flood of golden light?
Lily, dear!

And the miller, love, with his slouchy cap,
And eyes of mildest gray,
Plodding about his dusty work,
Singing the live-long day?
And the coat that hung on the rusty nail,
With many a motley patch,
And the rude old door, with its broken sill,
And the string, and the wooden latch?
Lily, dear!

And the water-wheel, with its giant arms,
Dashing the beaded spray,
And the weeds it pulled from the sand below,
And to send in scorn away;
And the sleepers, Lily, with moss o'ergrown,
Like sentinels stood in pride,
Breasting the waves, where the chinks of time
Were made in the old mill's side?
Lily, dear!

Lily, the mill is torn away,
And a factory, dark and high,
Looms like a tower, and puffs its smoke
Over the clear blue sky;
And the stream is turned away above,
And the bed of the river bare,
And the beech is withered, bough and trunk,
And stands like a spectre there—
Lily, dear!

And the miller, Lily, is dead and gone!
He sleeps in the vale below;
I saw his stone in winter time,
Under a drift of snow.
But now the willow is green again,
And the wind is soft and still:
I send you a sprig to remind you, love,
Of him and the dear old mill,
Lily, dear!

THE HIGHER CIVILIZATION.

The New York Tribune allows one of its correspondents to give the following picture of the present Radical Legislature of the Empire State:

During all the many years that I have been accustomed to observe the character of legislators and the proceedings of the body, I have never seen anything to compare with the present assemblages of representatives in point of shamelessness, rapacity, and recklessness of consequences. Their predecessors have often been noted for venality and greediness; but these people sell their votes openly, haggle about the price without pretense of concealment and then boast of what they have been paid, and all with the knowledge that they are within reach of the criminal statute, and that a felon's cell would be their fate if the law should be enforced against them.

'There is a good deal more, the World says, 'to the same effect; names and facts are given which are simply damnation.' The phrase is strong, but true.

Look now at the model State, Massachusetts, that so overflows with piety and philanthrophy as to insist on thrusting them in everybody's face. A correspondent of the New York World, writing from the Hub, says:

The population of Massachusetts, according to the last census, was 1,231,000 in round numbers. Crime, pauperism, vagrancy, drunkenness, etc., last year show the following ratio:

	One in	Whole No.
Paupers	122	10,573
Vagrants	68	18,000
Criminals	211	5,341
Drunkards	74	16,539
Insane and idiotic	308	4,000
Total		54,243

This statement of course does not include the army of political and religious lunatics who are fed and clothed by the people year after year, nor does it include the 18,887 vagrants reported by the chief of police of Boston, and the 47,000 paupers who were supported during the year outside of the almshouses. The fact of it is—and it is folly to attempt to disguise the fact—that Massachusetts has been manufacturing drunkards and paupers by the wholesale. More arrests for drunkenness have been made in Boston the past year than in any other city of its size on the continent. The only thing to be regretted in the matter of statistics is that the number of hypocrites and revelers in the secret debauchery created by the prohibitory law is not stated. At all events, it is safe to assume that, in addition to the hideous army of drunkards, the sad profession at night of fallen women amounts to not less than ten thousand. The official figures show that we have a grand total of about a million and a half of dollars annually expended for charities and correction by the state and municipalities—and the sum necessary to carry out the "great ideas" is yearly increasing. Crime and pauperism have increased twenty per cent. as compared with the previous year, and in the two principal institutions of the state the augmentation of numbers is nearly fifty per cent. of the number of 1865. Over $900,000 were spent in money and upwards of $100,000 in interest on the almshouse property, to support and relieve the paupers and others who had drank mean whisky; and of the 11,200 committed, nearly thirty per cent. was for crimes against public order and decency. To take care of those who compose the "triumphal march," it requires twenty-one institutions, whose aggregate cost in construction to the state is $2,366,728, and the total cost in current expenses to the state during the past fifteen years reaches the enormous sum of $5,161,344 81. To assist in keeping these institutions full, the sum of about $300,000 is yearly expended on the state constabulary.

DIAMONDS AND PASTE.

But what can be expected of a state that is degenerating—that is the fruitful Sycorax dam of political heresies, and whose pulpit is the tribunal of Jacobins? Massachusetts, truly, has no great names now, for she has exchanged her diamonds for paste, and in running after strange gods she ceases to respect herself. We do not believe that our "wise men" will imitate the Pretorian guards, who sold the Roman empire at auction; but there are signs, it must be confessed, of the state falling to the level of a cheap clothing store, since she has become the Jeremy Diddler of the union. Crime and pauperism are running a race with education. The amount of money raised by taxes during the year is $1,993,177. The amount expended in behalf of our charities and correction is $1,500,000 or only about $500,000 less than absorbed in diffusing "great moral ideas." Our places of correction and charity are nothing more nor less than standing inducements for persons to be supported at the expense of the people. In point of architectural beauty and comfort, they are equal to our schoolhouses, and therefore offer a premium for crime or pauperism. The murderer and the drunkard feel the benign effects of "munificent provision," as well as the student and schoolmate. The purpose of charity in Massachusetts is intended to diminish the helpless and make them self-reliant; but it is feared that Draconian laws neutralize all christian effort, when men and women indulge in wholesale buying and drinking, instead of exceptionable tippling and exceptionable drinking.

THE WHITED SEPULCHRE.

If any unsophisticated country gentleman would like to have a faint idea of the hideous and noisome corruptions of a republican government that has naturalized and adopted all the abominations of licentiousness and cynicism of the decaying and rotten Roman Empire, he may do so by reading the two following paragraphs. To know the whole, he would have to endure for a winter the miasmatic and pestilential stench of the great Cloaca of the Nation:

THE NOMINATIONS BEFORE THE SENATE.

The nominations and their confirmation continue to occupy the politicians, and the still numerous lobby, both male and female, are busy in negotiating exchanges between candidates and the high appointing and confirming parties. Both the executive and the senate seem to be proceeding on the ground that "half a loaf is better than no bread," and arrangements are constantly being perfected that result in a "slate." The services of ladies in this diplomacy are of such value and general use that this element threatens to develop into a dangerous petticoat government that will clothe it practically with unconstitutional privileges. The influence of ladies is more potent in many instances than that of lords, enjoying, as they do, the advantage of being called upon and dictating from boudoirs what appear to them to be desirable arrangements. The appointing or confirming intermediary having entirely confidential interviews with a perfect lady, fears not an expose, nor does he have before his eyes the dreaded prospect of an enforcement of the stringent bribery laws. It is all sub rosa—"hunky dory"—"mum's the word"—for ladies can keep political secrets.

GEN. ROUSSEAU'S APPOINTMENT AS BRIGADIER GENERAL CONFIRMED.

The contest for the vacant brigadier generalship in the regular army, vice Rosecrans, has been decided. Gen. Rousseau was this morning confirmed by the senate, and is therefore the lucky contestant. It is rumored that considerable trading took place in connection with the confirmation, and that Rousseau had to "go it" strong. Has the senate of the United States lowered itself to the depth of a New York board of aldermen? A "smelling committee" might perhaps answer the querry to the public satisfaction.

WHOLESALE MURDERS IN THE NORTH.

The Nation (K[illegible]) speaks of fifty murders that have taken place lately in Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania. This is more, so far as we can see, than has taken place in the south for months. What wonder is it, then, that the Petersburg (Va.) Index indulges in pleasantry concerning Senator Wilson as follows:

Be it known (and, if possible, believed,) to all the world, (the Hon. Charles Sumner included,) that the Hon. Henry Wilson, member of the United States senate from Massachusetts, did, on the evening of the 4th instant, from the facade of Jarrett's hotel, in this cockade city, military district No. 1, deliberately and, to all appearance, without the fear of man, deliver a public address on the late military reconstruction bill and other political questions of the day to a promiscuous assembly of white and colored citizens; and that to-day, the 5th of April, 1867, for aught that this deponent knoweth to the contrary, and according to his best belief, the said Hon. Mr. Henry Wilson, of Massachusetts, is living in his own boots, and in the full and free enjoyment of his personal liberty, as if he were in the United States, the same not having been jailed, abducted, bludgeoned, dirked, shot, hung, or in any other way mutilated or dishonored, or sent on the other side of the dreaded "bourne."

IN England they use super-posphate for turnips, so as to avoid weeds and the turnip-fly, and muck and mixed manure for wheat and other crops.

MR. BENJAMIN HEATH, the well known detective officer of Boston, is going to the Paris exposition to spot some of the thieves expected there.

RIVER MATTERS.

Weather and Business.

We have had a few days of lovely weather after over a month of such as is thus described:

It shines, it rains,
Then shines again.
What does the weather mean?
It bangs in doubt,
The sun comes out,
With drizzling mists between.
Now dark, now light,
Like day, like night,
'Tis changing, fickle weather;
It mists at times,
Then rains or shines,
And sometimes all together.

Business was very good on the landing and large lots of merchandise were piled up in front of the packets.

From the officers of the Des Arc we learn that White river was rising on Thursday. The Arkansas is high, with 8 feet to the Rock and 3 feet to Fort Smith.

The Ohio is falling at Pittsburg and at Louisville it was at a stand on Wednesday, with 8 feet in the canal. At this point the fall in the past 24 hours was 8 inches, making a total fall from the highest point attained this season, 4 feet 2 inches. The land opposite in Arkansas is now out of water and we hope the river will be in its banks before another week, at every point between here and Vicksburg.

Boats in Port.

Anna, Florence Traber, Celeste, Alice Dean, Des Arc, Dan Able.

Miscellaneous.

This evening at 5 o'clock promptly the Alice Dean, in command of Capt. Pepper, will go out for Cincinnati. Larry Harmstad & Co., agents.

The Dan Able, Capt. Lee, will leave for Vicksburg this evening at 5 o'clock, promptly. Vinson & Donohue, and W. Jay Johnson, agents.

The Florence Traber, Capt. Haines, will go out for Little Rock this evening at 5 o'clock. Vinson & Donahue, are her agents.

The Victor No. 2, Capt. House, John Grehan clerk, will leave for Osceola and way points this evening at 5 o'clock precisely.

The steamer Anna will leave to-day at 5 p.m. for Cincinnati. Capt. Shinkle commands. Vinson & Donohue and Levy & Miller, agents.

The Celeste, Capt. Pritchard, leaves on Tuesday for Arkansas river. W. Jay Johnson, agent.

The Baltic, Capt. Yore, will leave for New Orleans at 10 a.m. to-day. Larry Harmstad & Co., agents.

The Charley Bowen was sold at Pittsburg a few days ago, for $2625.

It need not astonish anyone to see the Gen. Quitman in port to-day.

The gay little packet Victor No. 2, is now in complete order, and leaves to-day, in charge of her owner and master, Capt. House, for Osceola and all way points. In her office will be found our friend Johny Grehan, a competent and clever officer, for years an attache of the APPEAL. We commend him to everybody on the big creek.

FOR WHITE RIVER.—The swift Des Arc came in with 240 bales of cotton from Jacksonport. Notwithstanding she made the additional run, she came in ahead of time. Capt. John Elliott intends going regularly to Jacksonport, and he will do it, sure. This packet is becoming known everywhere, for her speed and regularity, and has no superior in fare. Capt. Lee Finney is in the office and Matt Glass attends to freight, mules, etc. Levy & Miller, agents.

The Lady Grace, which has been running in Red river for some months, passed up yesterday for St. Louis, where she expects to load for the mountains.

The superintendent of the Little Rock and Fort Smith packet company passed through our city a day or two ago. He reports dull times on the upper Arkansas, and went to St. Louis to see what prospect there was for getting a mountain trip for the Van Buren.

Clay Rice, Esq., has resigned his position in the office of the Dan. Able. Billy Fields and Aleck Waddell continue on that steamer.

"While the Anglo Saxon tarried at Memphis last Saturday, on her way to the Arkansas, insulting epithets were hurled at her on account of her being in government service during the war. A portion of the crew went ashore to fight the enemy, who ingloriously skedaddled. The persons who used the insulting language were among the lower or lowest grade of rebels."

The above is another specimen of the want of truth which seems to be characteristic of the river reporter of the St. Louis Democrat. The crew the boat which had been "in government service" did all the skedaddling—and the fun of it was that they did it from one man. It was doubtless not the first time they had done the same thing, when opposed to what the Democrat calls the "lower grade of rebels. Mr. Reporter, you are without doubt of the "lowest grade" of radicals, but the person who scared you was one of the bon ton. Ain't that so, Sam.

It is stated that within the last six months a towboat and barges realized on the round trip from St. Louis to New Orleans and back a profit of $17,000, her total receipts being near $29,000.

Capt. Hurd was a passenger on the Richmond. He was on his way to take charge of his new purchase—the Monsoon.

The Missouri river is open from St. Joseph to Council Bluffs and Omaha. The Hannibal and St. Joseph packets are now running regularly.

The steamer Savannah arrived at Dubuque on the 9th. The river is clear of ice to the foot of the lake.

A joint stock company, under the appellative title of "The New Orleans, St. Mary and St. Martin's packet company," has been formed in New Orleans.

Mr. P. A. Higgins, river editor of the New Orleans Times, started with his family on the 9th inst., to Europe, and will visit the exposition at Paris. We wish him and his a safe journey out and back. River reporters of this ilk couldn't stand the pressure of such a trip. Two of 'em only went on board the Richmond and—had to be carried home.

The steamer Benefit was burned on Monday on the Alabama river. She was one of the Peoples' line of packets, was commanded by Capt. English and was on her way from Montgomery to Mobile loaded with iron and cotton. The boat is a total loss. One of the deck hands was badly burned, but no lives were lost. The boat was fully insured in New Orleans. The Mobile Tribune of the 9th says:

"The fire was first discovered between the wheels by the second engineer, as she was effecting a landing at Starke's woodyard, which is on the Alabama river, 105 miles from Mobile. He immediately cried the alarm, being unable to leave the engine himself, but before any efforts could be made to extinguish the flames the cotton on board had caught fire and the steamer was doomed, and the crew and passengers at once set about making their escape, which, owing to the fire, was very expeditious. The Benefit had on board about 200 bales of cotton, a small number of which, was for Mobile, the balance for New Orleans. All the books and papers of the boat were lost, and any further information at present cannot be obtained.

The Chicot Press of the 9th complains that our local packets have not left them any mail matter for some time back, owing to the high water. We would inform the Press that one officer in the Vicksburg trade says "he can't afford to give away papers," and in consequence, he now takes only a very few. The Press says:

"The packets have refused now for nearly three weeks, to put off the mails for this place, and as a consequence, our readers are deprived of late telegraphic news. We think the steamboats carrying the mails might, with but little inconvenience, put them off in a yawl, since they connot make a landing in the usual way. We know Capt.'s Lee and Berry to be accommodating gentlemen, and just at this time, when our people are all anxiety to hear of the condition of the rivers above, we believe they might strain a point to give them the benefit of what information is to be derived from the mails."

The New Orleans Picayune says:

The favorite passenger packet New Era, has been sold to Capt. A. Dugas, J. Dalferes, and others, and is to run hereafter in the Lafourche trade, where she was always very popular. She has recently been in the Red river trade. She is to take the place of the packet J. M. Sharp while that body is being repaired, and will leave on the same days, and be in charge of the popular officers of the Sharp."

The Vicksburg Times of the 9th says:

"Quite a sensation has been created about the running off of the steamer Pioneer. Last Wednesday night while lying at the landing undergoing repairs, she was surreptitiously run off. Reticence being desired at the time, we refrained a reference to it, that the U. S. marshal might advantageously take the matter in hand. A man by the name of Washburn is supposed to be implicated in the affair, as he represented himself as one of the former owners of the boat, and that he was fraudulently deprived of his interest in her. It is presumed he has taken her to Memphis for a legal dodge to get her within reach of the laws of the state of Tennessee."

DEPARTMENT NEWS.

THE DIRECT TAX IN THE LATE INSURRECTIONARY DISTRICTS.

The following table exhibits the amount of direct tax collected in the late insurrectionary states, together with the apportionment to each state under the act of June 7, 1862. The statement of the amount collected also includes the sum realized from the sales of property for the non-payment of tax:

	Apportionment.	Collected.
Virginia	$937,550 62	$468,674 51
North Carolina	578,194 66	402,950 65
South Carolina	363,570 66	222,690 97
Georgia	584,367 33	82 621 54
Mississippi	413,084 66	69,947 05
Louisiana	385,886 66	310,863 78
Tennessee	669,498 00	40?,844 41
Total	$3,930,152 59	$160,9,591 91

The amounts collected in Florida, Texas and Arkansas have not been finally reported to the commissioner of internal revenue; but, from reports already rendered, it appears that a large portion of the tax due from those states is still unpaid. No collections whatever have been made in Alabama. No collections have been made since the 3d of August, 1866, at which date the secretary of the treasury ordered a suspension until January 1, 1868, under special authority from congress.

FINANCIAL.

The comptroller of the currency during the last week issued national bank currency to the amount of $39,520, making the total amount issued to date $302,308,706, less than $3,411,882, which is the amount that has been cancelled and redeemed, including wornout notes.

Fractional currency to the amount of $218,000 was printed during the week. The shipments amounted to $207,833 86, of which $100,000 was sent to the Assistant Treasurer at New York, and the remainder to national banks and individuals throughout the country. The sum of this currency redeemed during the same period was $312,200.

The disbursements of the government on account of the several departments during the week ending the 30th were as follows:

War Department	$3,456,131
Navy Department	480,680
Interior Department	937,231
Total	$4,874,047

The disbursements on account of the same departments during the month of March were as follows:

War Department	$11,477,385
Navy Department	2,998,624
Interior Department	4,845,590
Total	$19,321,999

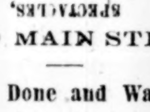

These figures show an increase of upwards of two millions of dollars over the disbursements made during the month of February last.

The receipts from internal revenue continue to run low, barely averaging a half million dollars daily. The receipts during the last week amounted to $3,155,588 14. The receipts during the month ending with Saturday footed up $15,183,226 21, and the total receipts from this source since June 30, 1866, the commencement of the present fiscal year, amount to $214,035,571 34.—Nat. Intelligencer.

The statistics in our Washington dispatches show that the total receipts of the government for 1866 were $523,977,389, nearly 50,000,000 more than those of any other year. $300,000,000 were raised by internal taxation, and $180,000,000 came from imports. The total expenditures in the year were $323,086,215, and while part of the balance has been used in payment of the debt, much is reserved as a basis of specie payment.—N. Y. Tribune.
